FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NORTH MEDICAL, P.C. WILL ADDRESS FLU CONCERNS AT PUBLIC SEMINAR

SYRACUSE, N.Y.—September 10, 2009—North Medical, P.C. (NMPC) will hold a seminar on public health Tuesday in Liverpool to address concerns about the flu and other health threats.

At the seminar, speakers Derrick L. Murry, MPH, and Dr. Bruce Silverstein, will answer questions about the upcoming flu season and provide information on how people can protect themselves from the flu and other future health threats. Murry is NMPC's Chief Operations Officer and a public health educator. Silverstein specializes in family medicine at North Medical Family Physicians.

“We all need to prepare for this year's seasonal and swine flu outbreak. At this public seminar we will discuss how best to safeguard you and your family,” says Silverstein. “This information is essential to your preparedness now and in the future.”

The potential for a widespread flu outbreak has raised concern for many people, especially since April when the H1N1 virus (formerly known as “swine flu”) first emerged.

The public health seminar is fourth in NMPC's series of Health & Wellness Seminars, which are free and open to the public. To find out if you and your family are protected from health risks, attend NMPC's seminar on public health Tuesday, September 15 at 7 p.m. in the Atrium at 5100 W. Taft Road, Liverpool. Attendees may register at the door or register in advance by calling 315-452-2836 or e-mailing messagecenter@northmedicalpc.com.
